Our ref.

Dear Cooperator,

We send herewith the Documentation Bulletin for South-East Asia, Volume XV, No.1-2, June-September 1980. It contains a classified index list of the articles on Co-operatives and allied subjects of special relevance to Asia, with authors' contents (or annotations) selected from the periodicals, daily newspapers and other documents received in the library of the International Co-operative Alliance, Regional Office & Education Centre for South-East Asia, during the period 1st January to 30th June 1980.

As the Bulletin is being issued after some time gap, we have deleted a few additional parts from it, i.e., (i) New Additions to ICA Library, (ii) List of documents indexed, and (iii) Author's index. However, a list of journals received and accession list of current additions to the ICA ROEC Library are being issued separately. Both the lists will be sent to the subscribers and to other recipients.

We regret that due to some unavoidable circumstances at our end we could not produce the Bulletin at regular intervals. Though the documents indexed in this Bulletin may have lost upto some extent their current information utility, they still have retrospective information utility.

We wish to assure our subscribers and other recipients that the subsequent issues of the Bulletin will be sent at regular intervals. We envisage that by the end of this year or by the early part of the next year we will become up-to-date in issuing our Documentation Bulletin.

Kindly acknowledge receipt and let us know how useful you find our Bulletin.

With Co-operative greetings,

Yours sincerely,

B.D. Pandey

PELA, Guiseppina:

Realizing the Potential of Farm Women.
 WORLD AGRICULTURE,
 Volume XXVIII, No. 1-2, 1979, pp. 6-9.

A national meeting of farm women is always important event, all too rare in a world where farm women are very often quite unorganized. It is even more important if the conclusions they reach are so wide ranging that they could be endorsed by farm women in many other countries. The following excerpts from the conclusions of the National Meeting of the Women's Movement of the Italian Family Farmer's Union (Confederazione Nazionale Coltivatori Diretti - CNCD, one of IFAP's three Italian member organizations), held in Rome, December 1978, is a pertinent example of the needs and aspirations of organised farm women. The special situation of Italian farm women is symbolic because it covers aspects of both developed and developing countries.

The aim of the meeting was to involve not just farm women and their female leaders, but the whole structure of the farmers' union. The Movement, in fact, aims at integrating the concerns of women within the organization itself, and by means of an open discussion, it also aims at selecting some policy lines suitable for adoption by the organisation. In its attempt to bring the Women's Movement out of the segregation that has often been its fate, the meeting was an open one, thus placing problems concerning farm women in a wider context. IFAP was represented at this meeting.

LOUSTEAU, Brigitte:

Young Farmers are the Key to Development.
WORLD AGRICULTURE,
Volume XXVIII, No. 1-2, 1979, pp. 3-5

The Second World Congress of Young Farmers took place in Paris from 4th - 9th March 1979. The central problem before the 300 delegates from 40 countries was how to halt the drift of young farmers from the land in the face of rapidly increasing world food needs. Miss Lusteau explains the concerns expressed by the young farmers at the Paris Congress, and outlines their proposals for meeting the challenge of feeding tomorrow's world.

Contents: The Challenge/Reasons Behind the Rural Exodus/More Respect for the Occupation of Farmer/Good Training of Young Farmers is the Essential/Credit/Co-operation Among Young Farmers/International Exchanges/Proposals to Advance the Process/Conclusion.

There is no doubt that cooperatives have made rapid progress since independence. However, they have yet to achieve their triple objectives. This is all the more necessary when the country is celebrating seventyfifth year of this august movement.

NIANGONIN, Oka: The Chamber of Agriculture of the Ivory Coast: Welcome to a Recent ICA Affiliate .
REVIEW OF INTERNATIONAL COOPERATION,
Volume 73, No.2, 1980, pp. 103-105.

The Chambre d'Agriculture de Cote d'Ivoire was admitted to membership of the International Cooperative Alliance at the meeting of Central Committee held in Copenhagen, September 1978, as a professional body engaged in the promotion of cooperation.

The Chamber of Agriculture provides official representation for the farmers, stock breeders, fishermen and foresters which make up three-quarters of the population of the Ivory Coast. It is the oldest agricultural organisation in French-speaking West Africa.

Before the date of Independence, 7th August 1960, Consular representation of the commercial sector had been provided by the Chamber of Commerce (from 1911 onwards) and of the production sector by the Chamber of Agriculture and Industry (from 1926).

The Law No. 60-340 of 28th November 1960 institutionalised Representative Assemblies for the economic interests of the country.

The Chamber of Agriculture and Industry was divided into a Chamber of Industry (Decree of 17th May 1963) and a Chamber of Agriculture authorised by a Decree of 9th January 1964 and set up on 6th March 1966.

The Chamber of Commerce, of Agriculture and of Industry are specialist consultative bodies legal advisers to the Public Authorities and representative of the interests of their respective sectors.

and the consequent behaviour examined schematically in detail as if a single product or requisite were involved. The problems of generalising the theory to include satisficing constraints on the objectives and character of the societies were considered less rigorously as well as the problem of extending the number of activities.

The membership of NCCF was confined to the State level organisations comprising 14 State Consumer Federations. The membership of NCCF was broadbased in the year 1976. The Federation started with 10 members, increased its membership to 70. In 1976 in order to broadbase the membership of 1500 and a sales turnover of Rs.50 lakhs eligible for membership and also the composite market consumer federations in the remaining 8 States and Union Territories to become eligible for membership. As a result, the membership of the Federation has risen to 86 consisting of State Federations and Wholesale Consumer Cooperative Stores.

The Role of Women in Agrarian Reform and Rural Development

There can be no single blue print for promoting women through agrarian reform because in addition to the varying sets of objective environmental and socio-economic conditions that face both sexes (Though differentially), there is no reliable normative image of what women's position in society and the economy ought to be after a limited development programme. Nevertheless it should be possible to offer a checklist of demands that can properly be made on agrarian reform on behalf of women. These are:

1. To ease the drudgery and long hours of work of women.
2. To secure for women structured equitable access to family assets and income in order that they can at the every least, meet the basic needs of their families.
3. To promote women, especially landless women, in new higher productivity wage employment.
4. To ensure that women emerge progressively in the social and political life of the community.
5. To promote the social and legal status of women.

ECONOMIC AID AND TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

DUTT, Srikant:

Indian Aid to Co-Developing Countries.
ECONOMIC AND POLITICAL WEEKLY,
Volume XV, No. 14, April 5, 1980, pp. 672-678

India, which is in a position of dependency towards the industrialised states of the West and to the Soviet bloc, and which has been a recipient in the past of massive aid is now conducting its own aid programme and forging relationships with some developing states. This suggests dependency upon India or at least mutual dependency, and calls for a revision in the analysis about State such as India. While India's economic weakness and its role as an aid recipient has received a great deal of attention in literature, its growing role as an aid donor has not received the attention it deserves nor the initiatives and changes since the sixties.

MADAIHA, M. and UDAYASHANKAR, S.:

Aid to Developing Countries - Some Recent Trends
SOUTHERN ECONOMIST,
Volume 18, No. 19, February 1, 1980, pp. 7-11

An attempt is made in this paper to discuss a number of recent developments with regard to foreign aid to developing countries such as fixation of aid targets, failure to implement these targets by the advanced countries, emergence of OPEC as a course, greater multilateralisation etc. Many of the arguments put forward by the developed countries and their economists are analysed to show how unjustifiable they are. Attention is also focussed on the huge military expenditures incurred by the developed countries, the inequitable distribution of aid among the recipients and the recent proposals for automatic transfer of resources.

Savings, Capital Formation and National Income.
ECONOMIC AND POLITICAL WEEKLY,
Volume XV, No. 22, May 31, 1980, pp.965-977

The Indian economy has reached a high rate of domestic saving and capital formation and yet poverty and unemployment seem to be on the increase. The level of growth is nowhere near that reached even by the middle level industrialised countries even though the rate of saving and capital formation seems to be approaching their level. Why is it that in spite of a high rate of capital formation, the rate of growth is low and why is it that in spite of an increase in the rate of saving there is an increase in poverty? The objective of this paper is to see how far savings and capital formation in India have increased during the three decades of planning that we have had, to examine the effect these increases have had on economic growth and increase in national income, and to suggest possible changes in the strategy followed regarding savings, capital formation and their appropriate utilisation for realising the national objective of increasing economic growth for increasing economic welfare.

India and World Economy: Search for Self-Reliance
ECONOMIC AND POLITICAL WEEKLY,
Volume XV, Nos. 5, 6 & 7, 1980 (Annual Number)
pp. 245-248

Would it be correct to characterise the Indian development experience - such as it has been as being in the nature of dependent development of the kind associated with the countries of Latin America?

This paper, while noting all the constraints in the path of economic development of India argues that taking the Indian experience as a whole since Independence, such a negative assessment is not warranted. Many social and economic indicators - the growth and diversification of the country's trade, increase in food production, decline in the proportion of foreign aid to net national product, the degree of control exercised by the State over the functioning of the transnationals, the growth of scientific and technological manpower, etc. suggest that India's performance compares well with that of many underdeveloped countries. The foundations for this growth were laid in the Second Five Year Plan formulated under the guidance of Jawaharlal Nehru.

New Development Strategy for the 1980s.
YOJANA,
Volume XXIII, No. 24, 1st Jan. 1980, pp.5-7

What does the decade of the 1980s hold for us? Shall we be able to achieve our targeted rate of growth? Can the pattern of development continue as hitherto or is there a need for course correction? What are the obstacles that are likely to emerge and how do we overcome them? Does the future hold out any grave threats or enticing possibilities and how can we meet them or make most of them? It is only prudent that we take stock of the situation and evoke appropriate strategies so that we enter the new decade well-equipped.

Jayewardena - A New Era for Sri Lanka?
AUSSEN POLITIK,
Volume 30, 4/79, pp. 427-440.

Sri Lanka, formerly Ceylon, has for the last two years, had an extremely able man as head of state: Junius Richard Jayewardena. Jayewardena put an end to the Bandaranaike era with an impressive election victory, gave the country a new constitution based on American and Gullist models and with the strong leadership of the state, has improved the chances of solving the country's major problems. Professor Ulrich Schweinfurth, head of the Geography Department of Heidelberg University South Asia Institut, has spent twenty years studying the development of the island of Ceylon. In this article he looks at the possibilities of the future following the decline of the tea industry, nationalised by the Bandaranaike regime, the Mahaweli Ganga Project which, if realistically planned, could eliminate the land shortage, unemployment and hunger, the Tamil question and the demands for a separate Tamil state. Jayawardene, too speaks of socialism and Sri Lanka describes itself as a people's democracy, but its liberal openness allows capitalist activity. Sri Lanka wishes to be modern and progressive but in fact it is as conservative as most basically agricultural nations are. Jayawardene realizes that there is a line in past policies beyond which he can no longer go and at the same time he wishes to speed up new developments. In both directions his long practised pragmatism guides him.

AGARWAL, Virendra:

Integrated Rural Development - A View Point.
YOJANA,
Volume XXIII, No. 24, 1st Jan. 1980, pp.19-20

A massive programme of agricultural and rural development is a sensible course for the country to adopt. Virendra Agarwal, in this article suggests that in addition to evolving policies and formulating programmes to benefit the rural poor, we should monitor the programmes with strong administrative commitment in assuring that benefits in fact percolate to the rural poor.

People's Participation in Rural Development.
YOJANA,
Volume XXIII, No. 24, 1st Jan, 1980, pp.21-22

Most of the developing countries in Asia are predominantly rural in character. Therefore, it is but natural that the Governments in Asia are concerned with developments of the countryside. The delegates attending the World Conference on Agrarian Reforms and Rural Development sponsored by the FAO in Rome last year felt that people's participation was the only answer to end rural poverty in the third world. While discussing the Union Government's Food for Work Programme the author holds that this programme needs to be strengthened and implemented effectively.

Dynamics of Rural Transformation.
A Case Study of Tamil Nadu,
ECONOMIC AND POLITICAL WEEKLY,

This paper brings together the empirical evidence available on the changes that have come about in the rural economy of Tamil Nadu between 1950 and 1975 with a view to seeing their inter-relationships and broader implications for social change. Its chief findings are that the rural scene in Tamil Nadu is far from static, and that the rural areas have experienced a new dynamism unknown in the past. The changes have however, been induced changes, frequently brought about as a result of decisions taken outside the rural areas. While some of these changes have been in the desired direction, others have not been. The negative aspects of these changes include the tendency for the small farmers to become progressively pauperised, the decline in the real wages of agricultural labourers, and the continuance and increase of mass poverty.

In other words, while there has undoubtedly been 'development' in rural Tamil Nadu such 'development' has only generated growth and affluence for the few and poverty and insecurity for the many.

The collective national efforts during the last few decades have helped stabilise new, unconventional bee-keeping industry in India. For its proper growth Indian bee-keeping has to be a part of mixed farming system in the agricultural sector and a supplementary self-employment for our tribal communities in forest areas.

INDIAN JOURNAL OF AGRICULTURAL ECONOMICS,
Volume XXXIV, No. 4, Oct.-Dec. 1979; pages 253.

Conference number contains papers read at the 39th Annual Conference of the Indian Society of Agricultural Economics, held at Bangalore in December 1979. Conference discussed three subjects. In each subject eminent agricultural economists from India contributed papers.

Subject I : Economics of Investment in Organisation of Extension Services in Agriculture. Contents: the following papers:

1. Efficiency of Agricultural Extension in Technology Transfer and Income Generation before and after the Green Revolution in India, by C.C. Maji and T. Haque.
2. Quantitative and Qualitative Impact of Training and Visit System on Different Groups of Farmers - A Case Study of Hooghly District, West Bengal, by A.C. Sen and P.N. Mathur.
3. An Economic Evaluation Study of Operational Research Project in Rural Delhi, by G.S. Ram and A.S. Sirahi.
4. Districtwise Return to Investment in Agricultural Extension in Haryana, by K.N. Rai and B.S. Panghal.
5. Returns from Investment in Extension Services in Agriculture, by Dault Singh, Ram Iqbal Singh and V.K. Singh.
6. A Study into the Nature and Impact of Agricultural Extension in the Punjab State, by A.J. Singh and B.S. Bhullar.
7. Evaluation of Agricultural Extension in the Mhi-Kadana Irrigation Project, by T.K. Jayaraman.
8. Contribution of Extension Services in Agricultural Production, by D.S. Parmar.

Subject II : Inter-Sectoral Linkages. Contents: the following papers:

1. Resource Flows between Agriculture and Non-Agriculture: Critique of an Estimate, by Ashok Mody.
2. Inter-Sectoral Terms of Trade in India, 1947-78, by M.S. Rethore, A.L. Nodd and V.K. Singh.

3. Inter-Sectoral Linkages of Capital Investment and Human Labour and Mechanised Energy System on Farms, by H.G. Goswami.
4. Measuring Backward Linkage Effects of Vrk Milk Processing Plant Amritsar (A Case Study), by J.S. Chawla and others.
5. The Production Linkage between Agriculture and the Manufacturing Sector, by N.V. Nambodiri.
6. Farmers' Terms of Trade in Rajasthan, by N.L. Agrawal and J.P. Kumawat.
7. Domestic Terms of Trade and Economic Development in India, by D.S. Sidhu and A.J. Singh.
8. Inter-sectoral Linkages - Flow of Surplus for Financing Investment by M.M. Bhatia.

Subject III : Price Spreads of Agricultural Commodities in Recent Years. Contents: the following papers:

1. Retail-Farm Price Spread of Rice in Selected States of India, by P.K. Joshi and V.K. Sharma.
2. A Study of Price Spread of Important Foodgrains in Two Agricultural Markets of Bihar, by P.C. Pandey.
3. A Comparative Study of Price Spread of Selected Agricultural Commodities in Karnataka, by S. Suryaprakash and others.
4. Price Spread in Groundnut Marketing at Micro Level, by D.C. Shah and K. Hanumanth Rao.
5. Dynamics of Price Spread Components by V.V. Desai.
6. Comparative Efficiency of Alternative Milk Marketing Agencies in Western Maharashtra, by Jagannath R. Pawar and Sitaram K. Sawant.
7. Price Spreads in Egg Industry in the Punjab, by D.S. Sidhu and P.S. Rangi.
8. Price Spread and Behaviour in the Marketing of Eggs in Himachal Pradesh, by Kanwar Prakash Chand and B.K. Sikk.
9. Study of Fruits and Vegetables' Cold Storage Units - A Comparative Performance of Different Agencies, by V. Mohandas and others.
10. Price Spread of Livestock Animals in Dhule Market of Maharashtra State, by S.J. Patil and others.
11. Price Spreads and Inventory Demand: A Study of Jute Crop, by P.K. Chatterjee and D.R. Mukherjee.
12. Price Spread and Small Farmers in Thane District, by R. Elango and K. Baskaradas.
13. The Small Farmer in the Product Market: A Study of Cotton Village, by R.M. Mohan Rao.

Reporteurs' Report on Economics of Investment in Organisation of Extension Services in Agriculture.
INDIAN JOURNAL OF AGRICULTURAL ECONOMICS,
Volume XXXV, No. 1, Jan.-March, 1980, pp.40-46

In all, 20 papers have been accepted for discussion on this topic at the conference. These may be broadly classified under the following heads:

- i. Impact of Agricultural Extension at the National Level: Inter-state comparison.
- ii. Impact of Agricultural Extension at the state level.

The second category of papers can be further categorised as follows:

- i. Studies focussed on the overall estimation of returns to agricultural extension investments.
- ii. Studies based on the experience of selected agricultural extension projects.

beginning has been made on firm foundations. The be best assured if its major wings - extension, research, training and marketing - function under

In any beekeeping development programme, the research projects and training framework should be wide enough to embrace existing different levels of beekeeping. Evaluating beekeeping potential, deciding the types of beekeeping to be encouraged in an area and programming about training for the basic necessities. Demonstration apiaries and encouragement to crop pollination practices can be of great benefit in training growers, beekeepers and apiculturists.

Natural factors put great limitations in the horizontal expansion of bee keeping in India. However, adoption of scientific methods of bee-management would enable the developmental efforts to exploit vast potentials for honey production, though not without difficulties. It would be also imperative to conduct market research on consumer preferences in case of honey and industrial uses of bees-wax.

Mere provision of resources will never initiate the necessary process of transformation, until all concerned - the institutional agency, the people, and the state machinery - have a firm commitment to act objectively and efficiently, a process which is most complicated. However, the programme of integrated rural development on anvil, should strengthen the cooperative institutional base, as under democratic planning a cooperative approach ensuring participation by the people, mobilising idle resources, is considered the most appropriate one.

ECONOMIC AND POLITICAL WEEKLY,

pp. 1931-1942.

A great deal of progress has been made towards dairy development on sound lines, but certain basic questions would still bear emphasis. The chief of these is how the energy input-output ratio can be kept as favourable as possible in the absence of sufficient pastureland by which to reduce the cost of animal feeding. In turn this raises the question of whether grain and concentrate feeds will be available in sufficient quantity and at low enough cost to sustain the genetic potential of high-yielding animals, and whether this can be achieved through a total food system in which animals compete minimally with man for foods that both can consume. The answer to this may well set the limit to the degree of dairy development possible.

Another important question is that of how to preserve the symbiosis between dairying and agriculture (that has been all but lost in advanced countries) so as to provide a low cost energy system. The small area of most agricultural land holdings mean that dairy animals can only be maintained in small numbers, and this would facilitate better utilisation of agricultural waste.

Another matter that is important is to work out procedures for costing milk in a realistic way under various situations, so that price always acts as a stimulus to sustained dairy development. Nutritional considerations overwhelmingly show that milk is indispensable only for infants (when breast milk is for any reason lacking) and that adults can well do without milk in terms of nutrition-cum-economics. Thus conscious attempts are called for to ensure that milk reaches as far as possible the most vulnerable groups rather than simply those who can afford to buy it.

Impact of Increased Dairy Productivity on Farmers' Use of Feedstuffs.
ECONOMIC AND POLITICAL WEEKLY,
Vol. XV, No.33, August 16, 1980, pp. 1407-1412.

This article describes why, in the present circumstances, farmers do not feed their animals better, to exploit to the maximum the animals' genetic potential, why it is necessary to distinguish between 'scientific' animal-feeding rates' followed by researchers and scientists and 'economic feeding rates' followed by farmers, and why it is the latter that must be taken into consideration for planning an increase in the country's milk production.

In examining the impact of the planned increases in dairy productivity on farmers' use of scarce feedstuffs, the article concludes that to increase India's milk production rapidly within the next few years using the limited feed resources available, a small proportion of the indigenous herd must be replaced gradually by high-yielding animals which are more efficient converters of feed into milk. Despite the fact that feedstuffs available are not sufficient to meet the scientific feed requirements of the existing herd, the efficiency with which these feedstuffs are used can be increased to meet the country's growing demand for milk.

The 30th Annual Congress of the JCCU (Japanese Consumers' Cooperative Union) took place successfully on June 12-13 in Yokohama City, Kanagawa Pref. with attendance of over 400 delegates and observers gathering from all parts of the country.

The keynote to the Congress concentrated to how to mobilise consumers power to safeguard them from spiral inflation and how to consolidate coops' potentials against ever-growing competition through implementation of Medium Term Plan. This year was declared "the Year for Safeguarding Consumer Lives against Price-Hike" by JCCU aiming at promoting the anti-price-hike campaign in all co-ops, increasing members' loyalty to co-op stores, establishing independent life style of consumers, and stimulating joint actions with other organisations. And urgent necessity was stressed to implement the targets set forth by Medium Term Plan as we launched into the final phase of this plan.

DEVELOPMENT DIALOGUE, 1980: 1, pp.55-67.

In July 1979 some 40 negotiators from Geneva and New York, high-level government officials and development thinkers and practitioners from both the Third World and the industrialized countries met at Scheveningen in the Netherlands to discuss the new international development strategy which the General Assembly of the United Nations is expected to launch this autumn. The meeting was an encounter of a special kind in the sense that these three groups of people do not have many opportunities to interact. One of the results of their informal deliberations was the Scheveningen Report, which is reproduced below.

The points discussed are : Perspective/Goals and objectives: redefining development, thrust of the new strategy/Framework for policy/Key policy and negotiating targets/Mean for action.

Strategy of Rural Development

KHADI GRAMODYOG

Volume XXVII, No.2, November 1980, pp.119-122.

The state of rural development programmes, if looked into depth, points out towards the need for a Central Institute for the Strategy of Rural Development. This institute will be first of its kind wherein both scientists and non-scientists interested in rural development will discuss the issues involved and thrash out further strategies. This will also work as a store-house of data which is so necessary for the present day planning.

Rural Poverty: Causes and Cures.

The pattern of development in developing countries including India has not been one of sufficiently absorbing the increasing labour force and expanding the output of the wage goods sector. The aggravation of the problem of unemployment in its various shades is the inevitable result of the wrong development strategy followed by these developing economies. As a corrective measure, priority and importance should be accorded to the farm sector supported by a well-knit programme of allied activities.

GUHAN, S.:

Rural Poverty: Policy and Play Acting.
ECONOMIC AND POLITICAL WEEKLY,
Volume XV, No. 47, November 22, 1980, pp. 1975-1982.

The purpose of this article is to evaluate the policy towards rural poverty as it finds expression in the Sixth Plan Framework (August 1980) with reference to the internal logic of the document itself and to the findings from a recently concluded field study in Tamil Nadu.

It is useful to take the Plan document as a departure point for discussion, because it sets out the proposed approach of the government for "reduction", if not "eradication", of rural poverty. In the course of three decades of planning in India, each set of government interventions in regard to rural poverty have amounted to "case-policies" in the same way as decisions of administrative and judicial tribunals generate case law over a period of time.

In terms of this legal analogy, the Sixth Plan document can be viewed more as an instance of "codification", upon which discussion and debate could be usefully undertaken.

INDIAN JOURNAL OF AGRICULTURAL ECONOMICS,
Volume XXXV, No.2, April-June 1980, pp.1-152.

A Seminar on "Data Base and Methodology for the Study of Growth Rates in Agriculture" was organised by the Indian Society of Agricultural Economics, and the Indian School of Political Economy, Lonavla, on February 9-11, 1980. The present issue of the Journal brings together the papers read at the Seminar. The papers read in the Seminar are :

Part I: Methodological Issues:

- Methodological Issues in Measuring Agricultural Growth: Lessons of Recent Indian Researchers, By V.M.Rao.
- Measurement of Growth and Fluctuations in Crop Output - An Approach based on the concept of Non-systematic Component, by V.M.Rao, M.V. Nadkarni, and R.S.Deshpande.
- Measuring Agricultural Growth, by N.Krishnaji,
- Decomposition of Growth Trends and Certain Related Issues, by Vidya Sagar.

Part II: Agricultural Growth in India:

- Growth and Fluctuation in Foodgrain Yields Per Hectare - A Statewise Analysis, by Chandan Mukherjee, and A.Vaidyanathan.
- Growth Rates and Cropping Pattern changes in Agriculture in Six States: 1950 to 1975, by L.S.Venkataramanan and M.Prahladachar.

- PATEL, I.G.: Economic Analysis: A Policy Framework for Indian Agriculture. EASTERN ECONOMIST, Volume 75, No.25, December 19, 1980, pp. 1352-1357.
This is the first instalment of the Coromandel Lectures delivered by Dr. I.G. Patel, Governor, Reserve Bank of India, on December 18, 1980.
Coromandel Lectures provide a forum where eminent thinkers from diverse disciplines have spoken on subjects of critical importance related to development and agriculture.
Dr. Patel believes it is not very meaningful to speak of either industry or agriculture being intrinsically more important than the other. He asserts that the policy of agricultural support prices has yielded rich dividends, but believes that these should be limited to a few basic necessities. He warns that policy towards agriculture should not be allowed to become an engine of inflation.
