Gives a brief account of the role played by NCDC in economic development of the country through co-operatives during the decade (1965-75). Provides a brief account of the significant contribution that NCDC has made towards helping the co-operative movement in the country in playing substantial role in the marketing and processing of crop as well as in the distribution of fertilisers. In order to implement 20 Point Economic Programme, the NCDC has begun to concentrate on programmes of poultry, dairy and tribal development as well as promotion of cooperatives in Rural and Semi-Urban Areas in distribution of essential consumer articles. The main features of the NCDC Act, 1962 are to plan and promote programmes for production, processing, marketing, storage, export and import of the agricultural produce and other notified commodities through co-operative societies.

With the reconstitution of Central Ministries on 11th October 1974, a new Ministry of Industry and Civil Supplies has been created comprising of the following three departments: (i) Department of Industrial Development (Audyogik Vikas Vibhag), (ii) Department of Heavy Industry (Bhari Udyog Vibhag), and (iii) Department of Civil Supplies and Co-operation (Nagarik Poorti Aur Sahkarita Vibhag).

In the past, the three departments were part of different Ministries and had separate annual reports. After the constitution of the Ministry of Industry and Civil Supplies it was decided to have one report for the three departments so as to present, in one volume an overall view of the activities of the Ministry. These three departments have been dealt with in parts I, II and III of the report respectively. An introductory chapter on the Industrial situation covers the overall activities of the Ministry of Industry and Civil Supplies. Third part of the report highlights the plans programmes and achievements of the Co-operative Movement of India during 1975-76.

70 percent of the loans advanced by the branch went to the small and marginal farmers. The common belief that the small and marginal farmers have not been benefited from co-operative long-term agricultural credit does not hold good in view of the above fact. However, there are certain inhibiting factors like psychological fear of risk involved, small land base to sustain the investment cost, cumbersome procedure, etc., due to which the small and marginal farmers are not attracted towards cooperative long-term agricultural finance has been discussed in the study.

The present volume of the "Window on Co-operatives in India and Abroad" attempts at presenting, in perspective, information on latest developments in restructuring and functioning of agricultural cooperatives in Asian and African countries for the benefit of co-operators and those engaged in the development of co-operatives in the country. The first three papers discuss the position of agricultural credit in these countries and the role of co-operatives. The paper on agricultural co-operatives in India gives a factual account of their present position and indicates in broad terms, the strategy for future development. The material relating to agricultural co-operatives in the South-East Asian countries has been culled from the papers presented to the Regional Seminar on Co-operative Credit and Top Level Co-operative Leaders Conference held by ICA Regional Office & Education Centre for South-East Asia in 1973.

The papers compiled in the book are as follows:

NATIONAL FEDERATION OF CO-OPERATIVE SUGAR FACTORIES LIMITED:

Sugar Co-operatives and Rural Savings.
New Delhi: National Federation of Co-operative
Sugar Factories Limited, 1976, pages 6, unpriced.

This broucher on "Sugar Co-operatives and Rural Savings" highlights the role of sugar cooperatives in stimulating and mobilising corporate and household saving from the rural areas. An attempt has been made to focus attention on how, within a remarkably short period, the sugar cooperatives have been able, to generate substantial resources from the farming community. Initially the sugar cooperatives needed considerable dependence on outside agencies for overall corporate investment. These have, however, over the years, through a process of voluntary deductions from cane price, generated sizeable savings whereby at the of the cooperative year - June 1975- nearly 75% of the assets of cooperatives stood financed from internal resources. Sugar Cooperatives have shown beyond doubt, their ability to be self-reliant in growth in the rural areas.
