Against all odds : the Decembrist foundation of the First Russian - Pre-co-operative Institution.

REVIEW OF INTERNATIONAL CO-OPERATION,
Vol. 68, No. 5, 1975, pp. 180-183.

"Many books, novels, stories and essays have been written about the Decembrists and their lives in adversity. They themselves, and their heroic wives who followed them into Siberian exile in to share their fate, have left evidence of their lives. But in International Women's Year their womenfolk deserve especially to be remembered, and it is for that reason that we are featuring the following article.

Decembrist poetry and painting exist, but no one so far has described those Decembrist activities which were, in some ways, the first attempts to create a co-operative institution in Russia : in the cells of the Petrovsky Prison where the Rules of what can be termed the first consumer co-operative of that country were hammered out, 13, years before the foundation of the famous Rochdale Pioneers' Equitable Society in Britain. Credit Institutions and their Impact on Agricultural Development in Africa.

MONTHLY BULLETIN OF AGRICULTURAL ECONOMICS AND STATISTICS, Vol. 23, Nos. 10-11, Oct. - Nov. 1974, pp. 7-15.

"The purpose of this paper is to carry forward in an African context the examination of agricultural credit institutions and their performance initiated in the December 1973 issue of this Bulletin. It considers the justification for establishing specialized institutions to meet the credit needs of agriculture, the stage reached in their establishment in various African countries, and the practical constraints on their performance."

Contents : Need for a specialized agricultural credit institution / Agricultural credit institutions in Africa / Extent of institutional credit coverage / Quality of service / Funds for lending to agriculture / Management and staffing / Conclusions.

Agricultural credit institutions in Asia and Latin America.

MONTHLY BULLETIN OF AGRICULTURAL ECONOMICS AND STATISTICS, Vol. 24, No. 6, June 1975, pp. 7-19.

"Previous articles in this Bulletin have examined credit institutions in the Near East and Africa and their performance in meeting the financing requirements of smaller farm units. The following paper provides a parallel summary review for Asia and Latin America based on seminars held respectively in Bangkok, 7-18 October 1974 and in Quito, 25-30 November 1974. Since the main substantive issues were dealt with in detail in the first two articles, this paper is confined to presenting tabulations by country of the main institutions concerned and short notes on features and positions specific to Asia and Latin America."

 THE PLUNKETT FOUNDATION FOR COOPERATIVE STUDIES,
 -Year Book of Agricultural Cooperation, 1974, pp. 165-182.

"Because of the recurring difficulties experience by industrial co-operatives, there is a tendency to regard them as having no role in attempts to induce rural industrialization in under-developed countries. However, it is not necessarily the cooperative structure that is the underlying cause of failure but instead it is the hostile climate to new industry. While the cooperative framework may impose certain restrictions, the special conditions of the cooperative may also provide the unique opportunity to overcome certain constraints in the development of industry. These opportunities may not be open to other organizational forms. Before generalizing on the role of industrial cooperatives (whether it is a positive role or a negative one) we must first examine the particular situation, and decide whether for that particular situation a cooperative form in the appropriate form of organization and whether any disadvantages existing with that form are outweighed by the advantages."

As discussed by the author the basic objectives of cooperatives in rural areas should be "(a) Maximum possible institutionalization of agriculture credit, (b) A substantial increase in the flow of institutional credit to small farmers and other weaker sections of the society, and (c) Reduction in regional imbalances in the provision of institutional credit. Certain concessions and safeguards in favour of the weaker sections have to be built into the institutional system. The following are some of the important measure should be taken. (a) Lending to be production-oriented rather than security-oriented ; (b) Priority to be given in meeting the needs of the small cultivators if total resources are limited ; (c) Collection of share capital in instalments from small cultivators, by cooperatives ; (d) Separate credit limits for small cultivators ; and (e) Liberalising evaluation of security and issue of joint loans for groups of small cultivators..

Occupational Distribution of Working Women - An Inter-State Comparison.
ECONOMIC AND POLITICAL WEEKLY,
Vol. X, No. 43, Oct. 25, 1975, pp. 1692-1704.

"This paper attempts an inter-state analysis of the occupational distribution of women on the basis of information from the 1971 Census. The author then goes back to the 1961 Census to analyse women's participation in work as secondary activity to their household domestic duties. The major findings of the paper are: (i) going by the 1971 Census definition of workers, which excludes all secondary work participation, while not even one out of every five working men is an agricultural labourer, almost half of the working women are engaged as agricultural labourers, (ii) of the women who participate in work only as secondary activity, almost nine out of every ten are engaged in cultivation with much of the rest accounted for by other work, which includes household industry, (iii) the proportion of women engaged in work as secondary activity, is as high as that of women engaged in work as main activity, (iv) a sort of regional pattern can be observed in the participation in work as main activity and there too, for cultivation and agricultural labour as compared to other work, (v) a movement from north to south and from east to west seems to be accompanied by higher female participation, with exceptions like Himachal Pradesh and Kerala, and (vi) the much-positèd relationship between concentration of small holdings and more intensive cultivation is not borne out in so far as it refers to the inter-state comparison of the employment of women as cultivators, whether as main or secondary activity."

BARINAGA, T.

Symposium on the Role of Universities in Workers' Education.

LABOUR EDUCATION (ILO),

No. 25, May 1974, pp. 32-39.

"The action by the ILO in the field of workers' education during the past decades has been significant for trade union organisations in various ways. It has facilitated the development of their training, study and research work. It has stimulated considerable interest on the part of other institutions in various aspects of that work. That interest has found positive expression in the increasing concern by universities with workers' education. The need to provide for further steps in that direction, stressed by universities and trade union organisations both in industrialised and developing countries, and the recognition of its urgency in various resolutions adopted by International Labour Conference, led to the undertaking by the ILO of a research project on the role of universities in workers' education. The purpose of the project was to identify the needs which university collaboration could help satisfy in the field of workers' education ; to analyse the forms that could be taken by this collaboration between the unions and the university, so as to equip the office to advise universities and trade union organisations and to help them to set up or develop training programmes. (Contd.)

331.881 LABOUR, TRADE UNION AND EMPLOYMENT (Contd.)

The natural outcome of that project was the Symposium on the Role of Universities in Workers' Education, held in Geneva from 19 to 28 Nov. 1973. Three main factors made the meeting timely and significant. Initiatives by participants had inspired the ILO in developing its action in the field of workers' education; their views on the issues for discussion would also influence that action in the years to come. The conclusions of the meeting were bound to have an impact not only on workers and their organisations but also on various educational institutions. From that perspective these conclusions might prove particularly valuable to those concerned with finding the right balance between formal and non-formal education."

"In Section I of the paper, is discussed the concept of economic development itself and an attempt is made to identify relevant indicators of performance. Three broad objectives of economic development are distinguished. The performance of China and India in each of these three general areas is examined in the subsequent sections. Section II is thus devoted to economic growth, Section III to Government says the famine was caused by devastation of crops by floods which were the worst in 20 years.

Last Bakri Eid (Dec. 25) three members of the ruling Awamy Party including a Member of Parliament were murdered in broad daylight while at prayer in different mosques. In three years over 3,000 political workers and many others have been slain. All political parties have raised private armies equipped with sophisticated weapons. The deteriorat-

Shaikh Mujiber Rehman, to suspend the democratic Constitu-

Everything in Bangladesh costs more than three times what it costs in India : coarse rice sells at 6 takas per kilo ; salt and red chillies cost almost ten times more than in our country. (The taka has the same value as our rupee.) Not many people can afford a square meal a day. Famine conditions may again prevail in February after the winter harvest has been exhausted. The Government is widely discredited because of inefficiency, red tape and corruption. All that holds Bangladesh together today is their Bangabandhu."

Agro-Industries : Key to Economic Prosperity..

KHADI GRAMODYOG,

Vol. XXI, No. X, July 1975, pp. 467-470.

"Agro-industrial development implies the growth of industries in rural areas through interdependence with agriculture under a system of mutual and complementary output relation. It is a process of joint growth of industry and agriculture in which the output of agriculture serves as the input to industry and vice versa. It must function either as an input acceptor or as an output donator to bring about an integration i.e. interdependence between industry and agriculture. Thus an integrated agro-industrial development is a dynamic and self-generating process."

JOURNAL OF MARKETING,
Vol. 39, No. 4, Oct. 1975, pp. 24-31.

"Cohen examines the major remedies for consumer protection through a paradigm denoted as prevention, restitution, and punishment. Preventive measures must be designed so that sellers' rights are not unfairly restricted to protect consumers' rights. Punishment applies in cases involving only the most abusive practices. Restitution offers the promise of developing remedies that are equitable to both buyers and sellers."

Public Distribution and Procurement of Foodgrains -
- A Proposal.

ECONOMIC AND POLITICAL WEEKLY,

Vol. X, No. 21, May 24, 1975, pp. 829-842.

"The scheme of public distribution of food-grains outlined in this paper aims at the following objectives: (1) a continuing and permanent system of public distribution, (2) comprehensive coverage of the vulnerable sections, (3) coverage of both deficit as well as surplus states, (4) distribution of at least such minimum quantities per capita as will not erode the consumption standards of the poorest, and, (5) charging a price that the vulnerable sections can bear. In order to fulfil the above objectives, the authors' scheme of public distribution envisages, (a) a system of compulsory procurement based on graded producer levy, (b) self reliance, the total volume of procurement from domestic producers being at least equal to the quantity required for public distribution in normal years, (c) equity in the distribution of the burden of procurement, and, (d) procurement at reasonable prices."

Is Management Really an Art ?
HARVARD BUSINESS REVIEW,
Jan. - Feb. 1975, pp. 54-64.

"In sheer banality, few statements exceed the assertion that management is an art'. By combining vision and technique, a manager, like an artist, can profoundly affect those around him."
